OSSAA Gold Magazine Features Doyle Greteman

(The following story appeared in OSSAA Gold Magazine. The Magazine is sent to all administrators and athletic directors in the state of Oklahoma. It was written by Terrell Lester).

Doyle Greteman says it's time to turn the page. Time to make a change.

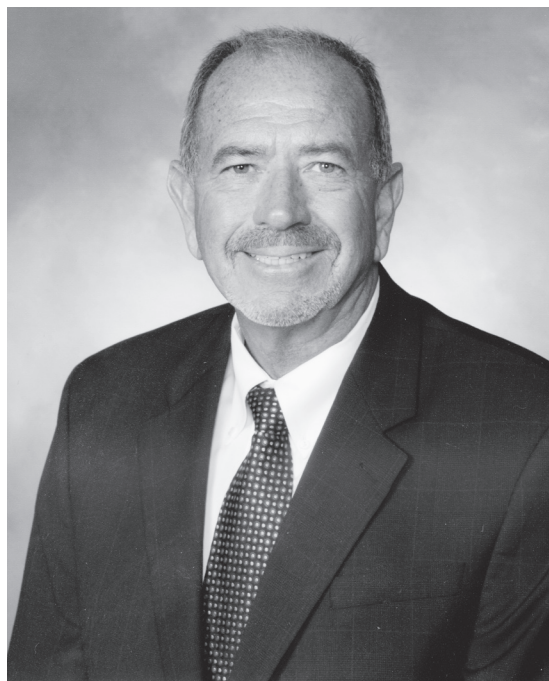

He is moving from his life's work into the rest of his life.

From small schools and larger schools, he has taught, and been taught. He has grown from teacher to administrator. Now, he's going to grow into retirement.

Greteman will be leaving education this spring, closing out a 39-year career that took him from Yukon to Blanchard to Hydro to Lindsay.

"I've loved it," he says. "It's been a good opportunity to influence young people."

A one-time speech and drama teacher, Greteman is an articulate and animated soul. His words flow clearly and confidently. He speaks of retirement not as the end of a road, but as the beginning of a new journey.

For the last 15 years, Greteman has been superintendent of Lindsay schools.

For the next 10, 15 years, Greteman will be in charge of little more than his family's whims and his own whimsies.

His options are many, his plans are simple. There are paths to walk, a country to travel. And there might even be a story to write.

In communities where he has worked as an educator, Greteman has contributed regularly as a sports writer and as a newspaper columnist.

"I don't know, really, where it all started," he says. "I just always loved writing."

He began penning a column, "Tall Tales," for the Elk City Daily News while he was a student at Southwestern State.

He has continued his journalistic calling, writing accounts of his school's football games for the Lindsay News, and now contemplates writing travelogues in his retirement.

The 61-year-old Greteman was the youngest of three boys reared on the family farm at Burns Flat in Washita County.

It was that foundation on which he constructed his career in education. "I had so many good teachers at Burns Flat High School that I just kind of wanted to be like them," he said.

His brother Don entered education before Doyle and

HARD TIMES PART I

I have been re-reading parts of The Worst Hard Time by Timothy Egan. This history of the Dust Bowl in the Great Depression is a vivid account of everyday life in that traumatic time in our history. We hear today about hard times in America. But these modern hard times are not even a dim reflection of the hard times in the 1930s.

A recent television report showed several people living in tents in a park in Seattle. Their homes had been lost in foreclosure. That is sad, but hopefully they will not be in the park long. And they were living in camping tents made of waterproof vinyl with camping chairs, camp stoves, and cots with sleeping bags. They had plenty of food; some had color television sets in their tents, and there were showers and restrooms nearby. Of course, this is a sad situation, but nothing even approaching the hardships of the 1930s.

The farm houses I recall from the 1930s had cracks in the walls, in the floors, and around the windows where the everlasting dust found its way inside to cover the floors, furniture, dishes, and beds.

Only a very few people I knew at Bradley had indoor plumbing or running water. Electric lines had not reached many farm houses, and many people in town could not afford electric lights. No one had heard of air conditioning. Houses were hot in the summer and cold in the winter. Most of life was lived in the daylight hours. People got up at daylight and went to bed at dark. One or two kerosene lamps provided a faint glow in the kitchen in early morning and after supper and perhaps for a short time in the living room before the family went to bed. Bedrooms were unheated in the winter. Many people slept on feather beds where you sank down into the bed and covered up with a pile of quilts over you to keep out the cold. But feather beds were torture in the summer, seeming to smother the sleeper in their depth that shut out breezes from open windows.

The poverty of the 1930s brought its own unique problems. Since there was so little money, people conserved what little they had. There was very little garbage to be disposed of. If we ever had garbage on the farm to be disposed of, our garbage disposals were called cats, dogs, and pigs. If there were leftovers, they generally lasted only until the next meal. Since few families had ice boxes or refrigerators, leftovers were often left in the center of the table, covered by a dishcloth.

I recall many afternoons when I ran into the house and straight to the table to see what was under the dishcloth. I might find a few pieces of chicken, some slices of ham or a few strips of bacon left from breakfast. Almost always there would be a few biscuits. I recall some delicious biscuits with cold ham or sausage making up a kind of sandwich. The bacon or ham might have a coating of cold grease, but it was delicious anyway. I learned to drink coffee during those afternoon snacks. There would be cold coffee in the pot left over from breakfast. I would pour some cold coffee in a cup, add two or three spoons of sugar, and drink the cold coffee along with some of the coffee grounds that found their way into the cup. I can still enjoy room temperature coffee sometimes. McDonalds and Starbucks are featuring "ice coffee" on their new menus. That is not new to me.

In those days, we had never heard of salmonella poisoning. We never worried about the leftovers being poison. We ate meat, eggs, vegetables, and milk products with no fear of becoming ill. If it was not green with mold and if it did not smell spoiled, we ate it. I never recall even once becoming ill from bad food. Some of my friends and family will not eat any leftovers even if they have been refrigerated. They would not have survived in the days of my youth.

In the Great Depression, people lived more simply and more economically. Farm people had little income because the land was dust and no crops would grow. People spent money only on necessities. Nothing was tossed aside or thrown away if it could be mended or repaired. Clothing was "recycled." Clothing was handed down to the next child or used as material for a new home-made garment or for a new quilt. Even socks were darned, and shoes were re-soled. Wooden apple crates were used as quilt trunks. Wooden cheese boxes were used as tool chests. Nail kegs and milk cans made good kitchen stools. Nothing was "tossed." Everything was repaired from furniture to cars.

People learned to "make-do." People adapted to hard times and lived their lives as best they could.

If we compare people from those years to people today, few modern people could be classified as living in poverty. Perhaps our definition of poverty today has changed over the years. Maybe only the perspective of time can define what constitutes real poverty.

News from the State Capitol An Update from State Rep. Lisa Billy

One of the most important roles society plays is to educate its children so they can grow up to become the leaders of tomorrow.

Along the way, many good intentions have led to bad results, which has negatively impacted our local schools. Unfunded mandates, red tape and restrictions from offices in Oklahoma City have come down the pike to school districts all over the state. Often, what is good for Oklahoma City or Tulsa is not always the right move for Blanchard or Lindsay or Purcell.

This year, we are considering legislation to let each town and school district figure out what works for them, instead of a big state bureaucracy handing down decisions that might not work well in a certain area. That's the idea behind Senate Bill 834, which eliminates unneeded state mandates and allows individual school districts to make decisions about what is best for their students.

By setting local schools free from unfunded mandates, it will allow the local districts, communities and parents to be stewards of the system to allow more involvement and activity on the grass-roots level. Instead of obeying some rule created in a far-away office building, the leaders of your town could decide what works best for the schools in your area.

Some say it would mean mismanagement by local officials, but I disagree. This state has been built on the backs of hard-working Oklahomans who have looked to build and improve the towns and cities in which they live.

When a measure comes along threatening to take power away from those who previously wielded it, of course negative items will pop up in connection to that piece of legislation. In this case, the potential loss of power has led to rumors of teachers losing anything from certifications to salaries. That is most certainly not the intention of this legislation. This bill has been crafted with the intentions of bettering our state's education system by bringing it back to the local level and giving those hard-working teachers better support in the communities.

So, I urge you all to not believe the distortions. Districts will still be required to meet salary standards, health and retirement benefits and thorough background checks. There will be no Trial de novo for teachers and no removal of the class size cap. Most importantly, the new changes will be voluntary for any school district. This will allow a district to either try things our or watch others and see what happens without being forced to join.

I am still reading the latest version of this bill and although I like many aspects of the legislation I still have reservations about protections for hard working and dedicated teachers. I look forward to hearing your concerns and suggestions.

Greteman

spent 29 years teaching at Burns Flat. "And I've always kind of followed in his footsteps in everything that I did," Doyle said.

The eldest of the three Greteman boys, Ken, suggested that Doyle consider studying law. It was no contest. Doyle says the decision to teach was an easy one. "I really felt like that's the way you could really serve people and help people," he said.

He has been serving, and helping, for the last four decades, spending nine years in the classroom at Yukon and three more years as assistant high school principal; seven years as high school principal at Blanchard; five years as superintendent at Hydro, and, since 1994, overseeing the Lindsay school system.

"The thing about public education - and I don't have anything against private education because we have a lot of good schools there - but in public education, we take them all," Greteman said.

"And that's been sort of, I guess, my life's work - to work with some of those kids who are a little less fortunate than the rest of us.

"I think I am an example, my brothers and I, all three of us, are examples of what hard work and discipline can do."

His mantra of working hard and being disciplined carried through to his two children, son Blaine and daughter Autumn.

Blaine, a graduate of Hydro, became a Rhodes Scholar while studying at Oklahoma State. After obtaining his doctorate from the University of California at Berkley, he and his wife, Mandi, and their four children, have returned to OSU where Blaine is a visiting professor.

Autumn was an All-State softball player at Lindsay. She and her husband, Tim Ledbetter, a successful homebuilder, live in Weatherford.

As Doyle Greteman was contemplating the good memories he has amassed during his professional years, he quickly summed them up in three words: "My greatest accomplishment" - his wife, Brenda, and their two children.

He lingered for a moment over the subject of family. Then he returned to the question of education.

"To be perfectly frank, there are so many memories that it would be hard to pin one down," he said. "I would have to say probably those years that I spent in the classroom were the most fulfilling.

"Not that I haven't enjoyed being an administrator, because you get a chance to, as an administrator, to also make a lot of decisions that affect people.

"But the nine years that I spent in the classroom were, probably, the most fun, most rewarding - just being around those kids day to day.

"Of course, teaching speech and drama you're also around a lot of good literature. You have to be.

"One of the things that I always tried to do when I was directing plays, we always tried to find a play that had some type of message, like 'You Can't Take It With You,' for example."

The three-act play, from the writing genius of George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, Greteman said, "teaches kids, while we're doing that play, that money's not everything. It's nice to have it, but there are more important things in life than money.

"We tried to always do good, clean plays that had a message," he said.

Over the years, Greteman tried to send a message to his community that he was operating a caring and responsible school district.

Sometimes the message was received. Sometimes it was not. "There are days when you just can't please people," he said.

"You may not be able to give them what they want, but as long as you listen to them, most people are going to be fine with you. They're going to think you are doing your job.

"And I think that what's frustrating sometimes is, by doing your job you make people angry because you have to uphold certain principles.

"Trying to do the right thing sometimes alienates people. And that kind of gives you a down side, when people don't wave at you because you had to make a decision that impacted their child's life, and you're upholding policies that are for the good of all the kids."

Greteman said that he has received plenty of advice concerning his retirement. But only one, he said, has been noteworthy enough to command his attention.

Stay active, was a friend's recommendation. Do something, the friend said.

"Whether you get paid or not, do something that will keep you active, and you'll live a lot longer," Greteman said, repeating his friend's advice.

That will not be difficult for Greteman.

"My wife would probably make short work of me if I just sat around the house," he said. "I will do something."

He always has done something. He walks. Daily. A couple miles, or so.

"It's very therapeutic. Mentally and physically," he said. "You can do a lot of things while you're walking. You can pray. You can plan. You can sort through things."

And then there's his farming background. "I did bring that part with me," he said. "I love to get out and dig in the dirt." He tends to his garden annually, the usual vegetables and such. All organic.

He might have chosen education over farming 40 years ago. But he has not forgotten from whence he came.

In those years since leaving Burns Flat, he has nurtured and fed the minds and the souls of so many young people.

Now it's time to hoe a new row. To plant some new seeds.

Bible Bee To Be Held Locally

The Shelby Kennedy Foundation is excited to introduce the first annual National Bible Bee, a motivating Bible memory competition for children and youth from 7 to 18. The goal of the Bible Bee is to build godly character in young people by calling them back to the lost discipline of scripture memorization. Most people are familiar with the Scripps National Spelling Bee, where youth compete annually in the nation's longest-running educational contest. While it is certainly beneficial for our children to commit the spelling of words to memory, imagine how much more life-changing it will be for them to memorize the Word of God!

Local Bible Bee Contests will be conducted throughout the United States Saturday, September 12, 2009. One hundred finalists from each of three age categories will then advance to the National Bible Bee for a two-day, world-class competition which will be held in Washington D.C. November 5 and 6, 2009.

First Baptist Church will be hosting a local contest September 12, 2009 at 401 SW 3rd in Lindsay. Interested contestants and their families may find out more about the Bible Bee Competition by visiting the Bible Bee website at www.biblebee.org. In order to learn more about this local contest being held nearby, contestants and their families may send an e-mail inquiry to lindsaybiblebee@gmail.com or phone First Baptist at 756-2266 if no e-mail available.

Official enrollment in the Bible Bee began February 15, 2009 and is handled online at www.biblebee.org. An associated enrollment fee of $20 is collected to help cover the administrative costs associated with the national contest. There is a reduced fee scale for families with multiple contestants. Enrollment closes on April, 30, 2009.

The Bible Bee Competition will distribute more than $260,000 in prize money with $100,000 being awarded to the first-place winner of the top age bracket.

The long-term vision of Bible Bee Competition is to equip children and youth to be bold ambassadors for Jesus Christ to the next generation.

Tall Tales

by Doyle Greteman

Superintendent, Lindsay Schools

Being a public entity, we are subject to various and sundry inspections from time to time. While one of the inspectors was here this week, he happened to drop by the cafeteria. As he was leaving, he remarked to Dana Crawford, our secretary/cashier, that he had been to schools all over the state, and this was the cleanest cafeteria he had ever seen.

Needless to say, that put a little spring in the step of the ladies who work so hard to keep it so. We definitely appreciate the extra effort they put into keeping the cafeteria clean. We know that our patrons appreciate it as well. Not only is the food excellent, but the fact that we know it is being prepared in a sanitary environment is important to know.

We want to thank our horticulture class for the excellent job they did in landscaping the area around the new addition to the middle school. It looks very professional.

Ag instructor Mr. Scott Stevens went the extra mile, using much of his personal time to pick up the trees, shrubs, and other plants in order to coordinate the planting.

It's this type of project that really makes us feel good about what's going on in our classes. This group of kids really put their noses to the grindstone in order to get this done in a timely manner. Some of the other agriculture students helped as well, and we appreciate their efforts.

We hear a lot about how kids these days don't know how to work, and I believe that in many cases that's true. Times have changed so much from a half century ago when family farms depended on kids to help make a living. Everyone had a job to do. With the dwindling of the agrarian lifestyle, many kids today don't really have that kind of responsibility.

Maybe that's why I was a little surprised at how quickly and proficiently the landscaping got done. Apparently we still have some kids around here who don't mind getting their hands dirty to accomplish a worthwhile task.

I've always appreciated the various opportunities that our agriculture students may avail themselves of, if they only will. There's virtually something for everyone. I've never regretted the time spent learning how to weld and use a cutting torch. It enabled me to build much-needed items for my dad to use around the farm.

Recently, Mrs. Watkins has started a meat judging team. This is another valuable skill that kids can learn that will benefit them their entire lives. Being able to identify cuts of meat and distinguish the better products is a nice skill to possess.

We could go on and on writing about the opportunities presented by being enrolled in vocational agriculture. I guess the bottom line is that when we look at some of the accomplishments of our kids these past few years, we are very proud.

Cash Cooper Selected To President's Leadership Class

Cash Cooper, son of Mark and Danna Hutchinson, and grandson of Leora Cooper and the late Roy Cooper was recently chosen as one of only fifteen incoming freshmen selected for the President's Leadership Class at Southwestern Oklahoma State University (SWOSU) in Weatherford, OK.

Several hundred applications are received each year for this prestigious group and from those, forty are selected to receive interviews. After a lengthy interview process, fifteen of these students are invited to become a part of the President's Leadership Class.

The President's Leadership Class is a four year program offered by SWOSU to recognize outstanding leadership qualities in beginning freshmen students and to encourage their participation as SWOSU campus leaders. The program is designed to assist in promoting and developing effective academic, social, and leadership skills. This is accomplished through direct participating in campus activities, seminars, guest speakers,

Early day church dinner. Approximately 1973

Turn off the highway and let's go down the Wallville Road. If you were just joining us, we have been talking about the Wallville Holiness Church and their annual 3 day Easter meeting. It starts on a Friday night and runs thru Sunday night. They always enjoy having out of state visitors and nearby churches. Now, we know that there's an expense in traveling so to try to help cut the cost, the church always provided meals for the visitors. In those early years the church sisters, Mary Jane Turner, Bessie Quinn, Naomi Hines, and Cindy Hunt would take a day, get together and go grocery shopping. That first year we were just learning the ropes on how to deal with the crowd. Tables and chairs were a must and it was something we didn't have. So, asking a favor of a neighboring church (New Mission Holiness, Pastor Brother Steve Moore) were kind enough to loan us as many as we needed. Borrowing the pickup of church member Cletis Quinn, I loaded it with tables and chairs. I was headed out of Maysville town when it started to rain. On the way the local gas plant we would pass. Little did I know that a tank truck had spilled oil in my path. The water and oil did not mix and when I hit it I started hydro planing big time. I could have sung "I'll Fly Away" because that is what I was doing with tables and chairs flying in all directions. What a way to start a meeting for the church down the Wallville Road.

Hello once again from the backroads of Wallville, America, Legend #852. Greetings Emma Bray, the old broomcorn johnny and a close, real close friend of Mrs. Willie Cunningham.

From the mailbag-another fine letter from Bob and Mary Mosely. Among other things they confirm the report of Jonnie Ann McCaleb that Toby Keith's father did attend Hughes School, his name was Hubert Covell. More to come from Yukon, OK.

Hi and hello to the birthday bunch, April 9-16. Alton "Pete Williams on the 9, Susie Corinna

Brown and the wildman Charley Rose Turner share the 11 with Chloe Blankenship. Leslie Jensen and Don Turner share the 12 of April, Bliss Kay parties on the 13, Maurine Turner blows out the candles on the 14, the real Superman Paul Jett celebrates on the 15, and a special birthday salute to Halie White on the 12. Hope it's a good one.

Last call-the annual Wallville Holiness Church 3 day Easter meeting will be April 10, 11, 12, 7:30 nightly, 10 a.m. Saturday and Sunday, Brother Phillip Bernard night speaker. Call 405-207-3268 or 405-206-7495 for more info.

To you early risers, the Hughes Baptist Church will hold their annual sunrise service April 12, 2009 at the Hughes Baptist Church. Call Ronnie or Barbara Blankenship at 756-4680.

Moving along, the annual Driskell Reunion is scheduled for April 11, 2009, regular place, Martha Allen Jensen pasture. It starts when you get there and ends when you leave. The social event of the year. Pray for nice weather.

The Wallville Church enjoyed the preaching of Brother Bryan Tinnin and wife. April 1, 2009. They were just passing through.

The Wallville Veteran's Committee salutes Vietnam vet E-5 Larry Brown of Maysville, 1970-72, 138th Aviation Radio Research, took basic training at Ft. Knox, Kentucky. One of Maysville's finest.

To make your reservation for Hughes School and Community Bash, call Carolyn Lewis at 405-756-7334 or Sandra, Miss President, Martin at 405-867-5374. $12 admission.

FYI-For your information in it's hey day Hughes Public School had attendance of two or three hundred children, not the tow or three I mistakenly siad last week. Another senior moment for the Owl Man.

A McCutcheon sighting the family of Kenneth and Deborah McCutcheon, Kenneth, a former Hughes school student has been in revival in Lindsay, OK. At the New Hope Holiness Church and seen heading toward Wallville for our big Easter meeting. Come and greet them.

The Wallville Holiness Church was treated to the preaching and singing of Brother Matthew Hunt and family, April 5, 2009. Getting an early start on our Easter meeting.

Battling high winds and cool tempatures we march on thru 2009. Come see us when you can. This is be kind to "Keith Bray" week. A man handy with a paint gun.

This week's column has been brought to you by your local "Otasco" and Alton Despain and Sons Western Auto Shop, Wallville first.

Well, we survived hydro planing, but each year it seemed something new like to put a halt to the meeting, one year water lines busted, just weeks before the meeting. Rain, rain, rain, one Saturday night after a rather nice day, the bottom fell out of the temperature and sent people scattering. Now, there are more plagues we could tell you about, but the hardest event we ever had to deal with was March 26, 1997, 2 days before our yearly meeting Mary Jane Turner, one of our church mainstays passed away from congestive heart failure. She was always a big plus to the church with here fervent spirit. And tambourine playing. It put a damper on the meeting, but we knew Sister Mary Jane would want us to go on. We had her funeral at the Erin Springs Baptist Church the day our meeting was to start. We sang the Lilac Bouquet and we all cried. That night her children and grandchildren were all in service with us. After a good service everyone went their way. But as I started to turn out the lights and shut the door, I looked once again into the sanctuary and I thought, I could hear the sound of a tambourine and a voice singing "When the battle's over we shall wear acrown, we shall a crown, when the battle's over we shall wear a crown in that new Jerusalem" as the lights went out down the Wallville Road.
