Matchbook Memories: Celebrating Number 500

By: Jerry Nye

This "Matchbook Memories" column is number 500. Since the first column entitled "Matchbook Memories," I have written a column each week for 500 weeks. Little did I know that the first article would become a weekly column that would continue for years and that would become so important to my life. Since that first column was published on October 21, 1999, I have written columns that covered a wide range of subjects. I have made many friends among the readers of The Lindsay News. And I have recalled many events, people, and places from my younger years that have enriched my mind and touched my soul.

My "Matchbook Memories" column began with what I thought would be a single article. For several years, I had thought about writing an article about a collection of matchbook covers that I had saved during my boyhood years at Bradley. From 1946 to 1952, I collected matchbook covers, many of which I picked up from the dirt Main Street of Bradley, which was also Highway 19. Travelers would throw out the empty matchbooks as they stopped at Bomhak's Cafe, McCann's Store, or Sonny Mitchusson's Service Station. In my collection were over 246 matchbook covers, which presented an interesting picture of life in those years. The matchbook covers advertised businesses, cafes, bars, products, political candidates, and even a Class D baseball team, the Hot Springs Bathing of the Cotton States League.

After I retired from Southwestern in May 1999, I began to think about writing for publication. The first article I wrote was entitled "Matchbook Memories," a nostalgic look back at my boyhood years as they were reflected in that collection of matchbook covers. I decided to see if The Lindsay News would be interested in publishing the article. On Tuesday, October 19, 1999, I went to the Cable Printing office and asked to speak to the editor. When Meredon Cable came out of his office, I introduced myself and told him I had an article for the newspaper if he was interested. It was 11:00 a.m., and the deadline for that week's paper was noon that day. After a pleasant visit with Meredon, I left the office, assuming that the article would not be published until the next week, if at all. On Friday, October 22, I called Monica Penner, the managing editor at that time, and asked her if Meredon had read my article. She told me it had already been printed in the October 21 edition of The Lindsay News, which I had not received yet in the mail. Then she asked me if I would be interested in writing a weekly column for The Lindsay News. I was totally surprised. I told her to let me think about it.

When I told my wife about the conversation, she urged me to accept the offer. I was reluctant at first, wondering if I had enough to write about for a weekly column.

When I called Monica back, I told her that I would begin a weekly column and, when I ran out of material, I would quit. That was 499 columns ago. Since the first article was entitled "Matchbook Memories," the name of the column became "Matchbook Memories," which it continues to be called.

I received an excellent response to that first column. Mrs. Hess, an Alex teacher at the Bradley School location, took her class on a walking tour of Bradley Main Street. They talked about my article as they walked along the deserted Main Street, trying to imagine what it was like from the description in my article. Each student wrote me a letter, commenting on their responses to my article. Then Mrs. Hess invited me to come to the Bradley School to present a program about my matchbook covers to her fifth and sixth grade students. It was a wonderful day. I displayed all 246 of my matchbook covers on tables in the Bradley gym. I told the grade school students stories about some of the matchbook covers, about my memories of Bradley Main Street, and about my memories of going to school in that building more than fifty years ago. Then the students walked around the tables and looked at the matchbook covers, asked questions about some of them, and, especially, asked me about my story about Sheriff DeArthur Wilson shooting a man on the porch of the building that was later McCann's Store. One little boy said, in almost a whisper, "I am never walking across that porch again."

Since that first column, I have written about a myriad of subjects. I have written many articles about Bradley School, the teachers I had there, the sports teams I recall, and the many friends who shared those years in that place. I have written about the work we did there in the broomcorn patches and the hay fields. I have written a number of articles about country music and the role it played in our lives then and now. Many of my articles have related to the Bradley Cemetery and the friends and relatives buried there. Some articles were tributes to friends and family members. Some were tributes to veterans and descriptions of Memorial Day ceremonies presented by the Lindsay American Legion Post.

In my "Matchbook Memories" column, I have tried to capture what it was like to grow up in that time and place. I have tried to describe the hardships of the Great Depression, the trauma of the World War II years, and the uncertainty of the Korean War era. I have tried to capture the wonder of being a young boy with a wonderful dog on a remote farm during the World War II years. I have attempted to acknowledge the debt I owe to my wonderful parents, to my teachers, and to my wonderful wife and sons, who have all added so much to my life. And now as I reach this milestone of 500 articles, I thank The Lindsay News for providing the venue through which my articles can be shared with so many people who can relate to the memories we all share. I particularly appreciate Gina and Darrell Cable making this 500th "Matchbook Memories" a special occasion.

When I published the first "Matchbook Memories" article on October 21, 1999, I had no idea of what would follow. And I have no idea of what lies ahead. But the surprises of life make it all interesting. I look forward to what the future holds for "Matchbook Memories."

Tall Tales

by Doyle Greteman

Superintendent, Lindsay Schools

Last week, Brenda and I took a whirlwind trip to Iowa City, Iowa, to look at some houses with our son, Blaine, his wife, Mandi, and the twins, Whitman and Beckett.

You see, he has taken a teaching position at the University of Iowa, and they'll be moving there at the end of the summer.

It was a good opportunity to do a little bonding with the twins. You know, when your son has four kids between the ages of four years (oldest) and nine months, (twins) the younger ones tend to not get as much attention as they would if the older siblings weren't cornering the market.

These little guys were quite a treat, as they competed with each other for their dad's attention. It was particularly noticeable when we would go out to eat. There they would be, sitting in their high chairs, trying to get his attention by making silly faces, laughing, moving their heads from side to side, etc.

It was all fun and games until one of them would get a little too excited and head butt the table accidentally, or dive chin first into the table. That's when the crying began. Fortunately, there were no serious injuries, and the competition usually ended in a draw.

Iowa City is around 700 miles from Lindsay, so it can be driven in one day. That is, if you're young and crazy, or just young, or maybe just crazy. We decided to stop half-way on the trip up there, but since time was of the essence, decided to drive all the way through on the way home. Thank goodness there were four of us to switch off behind the wheel.

Actually, our roots are in Iowa, as most of my family migrated to Oklahoma from western Iowa back in the late 1800's and early 1900's. It is a beautiful state, with neat old farmhouses that look like something from a century ago dotting the countryside.

Real estate in Iowa City is a little pricey, as I suppose it is in most college towns. It's amazing to think what some of the homes are listed at, but I guess it's the old law of supply and demand.

One of the most interesting differences in housing there is that almost every house has a basement. I don't think it has as much to do with the threat of tornadoes as it does with the cold winter temperatures, with the low frost line. We saw basements of every size and shape, from rough and musty to dry and finished.

As they were looking at houses and narrowing down their choices, I found it quite interesting that the two they ended up with as their first two choices were located in the same elementary school district. It's known as an excellent school, with a really good mascot.

All great schools take pride in their tradition, their students, their faculty, etc., and last, but not least, their mascot. Of all the schools in Iowa City, guess what the mascot is for the elementary school where these two houses lie? You guessed it: the Leopards!!!

I know we're not really supposed to look for signs. But if we had to have one, could you think of a better one? Go Leopards!!!

Turn off the highway and let's go down the Wallville Road. Nancy Pelosi called my office the other day and said, "Al, what's all this flak about dissolving the Wallville Road?"

I said, Well, Nancy, I wouldn't lie to you, but there is that possibility."

What people don't realize is that the Wallville Road is more than just a place. It's a feeling. A spirit that has evolved with people over the years. It's our ancestry, our birthright, a heritage that must be carried for generations to come. It was that when a young Dard Ellithorp, on horse back, encountered some men in their Model A in 1933 stuck in the big black mud hole as Preston Bunch would have called it. They tried to part Dard from his horse, but he disagreed, found out later these men had just held up a local bank. The Wallville Road is broomcorn johnnies following a water wagon to one of the Kay boys broomcorn patch. It's 44 square miles of bus route for old Hughes School. It leads to Rush Creek, the Table Tops, and to one-room school houses here and there. It could take you to the cotton patch, E.E. Alcorn's place, or a watermelon patch. From World War I and World War II, Korea, and Vietnam boys left and come back men. Help us if there's ever a time we can't go down the Wallville Road.

Greetings fellow sojourners on the road of life. Hope things are well with you as we near Summer 2009. Legend #860.

Our hearts go out to the Miller family at the passing of their mother, Ethyl Maurine Miller (93). She passed away June 27, 2009. Mrs. Miller and husband Lester were giants in the Hughes community.

Direct from the pages of old Al's almanac. In 1963, the hey day of broomcorn you could call PL 6-2609 and get W. Flow Briscoe, broomcorn dealer or call PL 6-2407 and get John Morrison and Sons, broomcorn buyers.

The Wallville Veterans Committee remembers the service of local soldier Charlie Pratt. Serving time in occupied Japan, 16 months in World War II with an engineering outfit.

To fine tune this column, send your news to Rt. 3 Box 222-A, Pauls Valley, OK 73075 and that's subject to change or call 405-207-3268 or 405-207-1691 or by carrier pigeons or the old pony express rider.

The old pony express rider came in with belated birthday wishes to Michelle Work whose birthday was June 3. Hope it was a good one.

The Hunt hacienda has been honored to have had Timothy and Hannah Hunt, Matthew Hunt of Waurika, Jesse A. Hunt, missionary to India, and Heath Bray visiting in their home last week.

One more time-Hughes bulldog and community get-together, June 27, 2009. Maysville Assembly of God Fellowship Hall, doors open at 4 p.m., dinner at 6 or thereabouts. Admission is $12.

May 30, 2009 Miss Leslie Jensen became the bride of Mr. Chad Dickenson at the Assembly of God Church in Maysville. Reverend Steve Mayhan performed the ceremonies. Many Jensens and Dickensons were in the crowd.

Outstanding services, outstanding crowds, outstanding preaching at the annual Blanchard camp meeting. Churches from many states and missionaries were on hand, Panama, Haiti, and Mexico.

Thanks this week to our sponsors, the Hay Haulers union 4653 and also Miss Frances and Ding Dong school. We couldn't do it without you.

It was a musty, dusty old dirt road, where an old Hughes School bus carried it's precious load. It was where the Whites, Holdscaws, Works, and a thousand others made their abode, while kicking rocks down the Wallville Road.

OBITUARY

Maxine Beck
1919-2009

Maxine Beck passed from this life on Saturday May 30, 2009 at ninety years of age at the Lindsay Manor Nursing Home in Lindsay, OK where she had been a resident for one week after spending several weeks in the Pauls Valley General Hospital after a battle with heart disease.

Maxine Vestal James Beck was born May 16, 1919, in Lindsay, OK, as one of three children of Jesse Lee James and Ada Kimbrell James. She attended a rural school in Garvin County through the eighth grade. She spent her early life south of Lindsay as a young "country" girl in every sense of the word as she was often seen riding her horse in the country and helping her father in the fields as she guided her own team of mules alongside her father in working the fields. She later was a successful homemaker and helpmate to her husband, Vearl, in his business ventures.

Maxine and Vearl Beck were married for sixty-seven years after having married at Pauls Valley August 3, 1940. Through the years Maxine and Vearl worked as a team in farming and cattle operations. This was done in addition to her number one job as a "homemaker" at her home in Erin Springs. She enjoyed a long life with her husband, Vearl, as she helped him every step of the way for sixty-seven years until his death on October 17, 2007.

Maxine was a Christian and long-time member of the Erin Springs Baptist Church. She was Class Secretary/Treasurer for thirty-five years. Maxine's Sunday School class was a special part of her life as she often spoke of the ladies of the class and her precious teacher, Hazel Decker. She had fond memories of the group and recalled often her special memory of their Branson trip together and the laughs they shared. It was always interesting to note how she never promoted out of that class. Her more recent teacher, Bobbie Hilliard, and members of the class continued to make her a valued member of the class in her later years. Maxine loved to cook for everyone and insisted that you eat when you visit. She seemed to always have a "buffet" prepared when Whitney Hope was visiting "grandma and grandpas" house. Maxine deemed it her mission to prepare food for bereavement dinners at the church even when she was no longer able to attend services. She continued to prepare food for bereavement dinners until she entered the hospital. Maxine was always looking for new and better recipes to cook. In her earlier years, she was a faithful kitchen worker for Bible School as she felt this was how she could help and was her calling to service.

Maxine was very active in the garden. She had plants ready to plant this Spring when she became ill. She took her gardening serious. Vearl and later Dan had to get the ground plowed at the right time and in the correct manner. She was always doing battle with "critters" that invaded her garden. She was often seen chasing our good neighbor, Jay L. Edgar's guineas out the garden on a regular basis. At the age of eighty-nine, she continued to set traps for raccoons and skunks that destroyed Dan's cattle feed in the barn. In January of this year, she was sprayed by an annoyed skunk because of her antics.

Maxine is survived by her son Danny Vearl Beck and wife, Valerie and granddaughter, Whitney Hope Beck of Lindsay. Other grandchildren include Jon and Jennifer Bakewell and son, Jacob of Piedmont and Cari Bakewell James and her children, Savannah, Eden, and Jaden James of Chickasha, and Daniel Bakewell of Mustang.

Maxine is also survived by her brother-in-law, Ray Newby. Surviving nephews are Douglas Beck, James Ray Newby, Mickey Newby, Ron Newby, and Kevin Newby. She is survived by two nieces, Carolyn Beck and Annette Smith.

In addition to her husband, Vearl Beck, Maxine was preceded in death by her parents, Jesse and Ada James. She was also preceded in death by her siblings Fillmore James and Von Newby.

Services for Maxine were Tuesday, June 2, 2009 at 2 p.m. at the Erin Springs Baptist Church on Hwy 76 South of Lindsay, OK with Brother Bill

Love and Pastor Bryan Shaw officiating. Interment was at the Purdy Cemetery. Funeral arrangements were under the direction of B.G. Boydston Funeral Home of Lindsay, OK. Condolences may be sent to the family online at www.boydstonfuneralhome.com.
